Temi Oyeyola Sometimes you get in the mood for a little suspense, and there's no better way to scratch the itch than with a killer book- literally. Thrillers and Mysteries never fail to get your heart pumping, making you turn the page at warp speed, and delivering a strangely satisfying worry about what's to come. Naturally, these exciting domestic and psychological thrillers make for excellent beach reading or poolside companions. To add a bit of excitement to the bookshelf, we found some of the best thriller books out there. And you can recognize one in particular that has been adapted into the Netflix show: You, which aired its second season in December and stars Penn Badgley as book killer Joe Goldberg. If you want to read the novel that started it all, check out Caroline Kepnes's tale below, plus more of the best thriller books of all time. You'll be glad you're reading them on a hot summer day, because they'll all send spine chills. Courtesy We're still a few months away, at least from being able to get our thrills in amusement parks, sporting events and escape rooms, but adrenaline junkies still have one place to turn to get their fix: the bookshelf. For fans of heartbreaking stories about crime and suspense, nothing makes for a better escape from reality than a good thriller novel. Fortunately for such people, we followed the best. Read on to a list of our top 16 thrillers from the 21st century and beyond. Advertising - Continue reading below 1 Gone Girl Gillian Flynn There's a reason Gillian Flynn is a household name: She's the queen of a 21st-century suspense novel, her prose obsessively readable, her troubled heroines- and villains-cultural icons in herself. Whichever of her books is your favorite, there is no doubt that Gone Girl, the zeitgeist shaping story about a missing woman and husband under suspicion for her disappearance, is a post-crisis classic. 2 The Woman in Cabin 10 Ruth Ware If Gillian Flynn is the queen of modern waiting, Ruth Ware is a knight presiding over the Round Table. Oft is likened to the modern Agatha Christie, Ware stands out for thrillers set within cramped spaces, such as a woman in cabin 10, mounted aboard a cruise ship where a travel journalist witnesses a murder. When she can't find any evidence that the victim has ever been on board, writer Law begins to question her own sanity. 3 Your Home will pay Steph Cha barnesandnoble.com $24.50 We've featured this novel before because it's just good: an urgent (and suddenly timely) review of racial tensions in Los Angeles, Steph Cha's latest is a page turner about two families - one black and one Korean who has to contend with the legacy of a crime that has shaken both their families in the months leading up to 1992 L.A. 4 Guest list Lucy Foley barnesandnoble.com $22.00 Relative newcomer Lucy Foley has honed her unique brand of reverse whodunit suspense to science, and thank you for that. As in The Hunting Party, Foley's breakthrough thriller from 2018, the guest list is set for a swanky wedding-gone-wrong on a remote Scottish island, starts with murder and then plays the game to stay away with the victim's identity until the very last pages. 5 You, Volume 1 by Caroline Kepnes We all owe Caroline Kepnes a debt for penning the source material that gave us Penn Badgley's terrible performance as Joe Goldberg on the hit Netflix serial killer show You, but the original book is nothing to sneeze at either. The first in the series (Books 3 and 4 are on the way, according to Kepnes), is a pitch-perfect thriller bucks the genre of gripping suspense novels like Strangers on the Train (yes, as in the Hitchcock film) and Deep Water. Not to mention the fact that it is the handle of the fantastic series Ripliad, which traces the steps of a brilliant and dangerous scammer. 7 Black Water Rising Attica Locke barnesandnoble.com $13.50 You already know Attica Locke's work, whether or not you understand it. The author is also an experienced screenwriter who finds empires when they see us, and little fires everywhere among her television credits. But it's her famous debut novel, set in 1980s Texas and followed by a down-on-his-luck lawyer who gets in over her head after saving a woman from drowning, that you should know now. 8 Indomitable State roxanne Gay barnesandnoble.com $16.00 Bad Feminist, it's not. Released in the same year as her breakout essay collection, Roxanne Gay's debut novel tells the story of a Haitian-American woman who is kidnapped and brutally tortured when her wealthy Haitian developer father refuses to pay her a ransom. 9 Perfect Nanny Leela Slimani barnesandnoble.com $14.50 Remember The Nanny Diaries? Well, it's as if someone had cleaned the pages of this book with arsenic. Inspired by a real-life event that took place on the Upper West Side in 2012, Leela Slimani's first book, to be published in the United States, begins with the unthinkable: a nanny kills two children in her indictment and then tries to kill herself. The story then jumps back in time for several months, inviting readers to try to figure out how and why this horrible happened. 10 They all fall for Rachel Howzell Hall barnesandnoble.com $27.00 Who Doesn't Like Good Strangers, united by a terrifying mystery thriller? At one time James Patterson collaborator Rachel Howzell Hall's heart-pumping standalone novel, seven people are invited to travel to a remote private island, only to find that they were called there under a false draw, and their mysterious host has Agenda. 11 11 Stephen King When it comes to books that excite and frighten, Stephen King IS GOAT. Newcomers to his work can do worse than start with Misery, which follows popular writer Paul Sheldon as he gets rescued from a snowy car accident by a superfan and former nurse Annie Wilkes- only to discover that he is now in even greater danger. 12 Vegetarian Han Kang barnesandnoble.com $13.50 Part domestic thriller, part Kafka-esque allegory, Khan Kang Man Booker International Prize-winning three-part novel centers on a woman who decides to become a vegetarian after waking up from a horrible, blood-soaked nightmare. Sounds harmless, doesn't it? It's not: The vegetarian is cruel and relentless, following his protagonist through sexual abuse, eating disorders, and psychological torment. 13 Good Son You-Jeong Jeong barnesandnoble.com $16.00, an unreliable narrator-major trail of suspense genre. When 25-year-old Yu-jin wakes up to discovering his mother's dead body at the bottom of the stairs of their sleek apartment, he realizes he doesn't remember the night before the vague recollection of his mom calling his name. When he desperately searches for the truth about what happened that night, Yu-jin unearths some family secrets that cannot be reburied. 14 These Bones Not My Baby Tony Cade Bambara barnesandnoble.com $24.00 Tony Cade Bambara These Bones Are My Child Is Not Just a Thriller; it is a masterpiece of American literature. (Just ask Toni Morrison - she was the editor of Bambara and a longtime friend.) Published posthumously and set against the backdrop of the 1979-1981 Atlanta murder, Bambara's latest novel follows a mother whose worst nightmare is realised when her teenage son goes missing. 15 Girl with Dragon Tattoo Stieg Larsson released in native Swedish Stieg Larsson in 2005 and in English in 2008, The Girl with the Dragon Tattoo introduced the world of hacker-avenger Lisbeth Salander - and became an almost instant literary phenomenon in the process. Larsson's first novel, the posthumously published Millennium series, puts Lisbeth and her co-hero Michael Blomkvist on the trail of a woman from a wealthy family who mysteriously disappeared 40 years ago. 16 You'll know me by the name of Megan Abbott Megan Abbott may not be as widely known as that of Gillian Flynn, but she's equally as important a writer for fans of suspense and thriller fiction, and you'll know me showcases the author at her best. Abbott's novel follows Katie and Eric Knox, the intense stage parents of the 15-year-old gymnastics star, as the news of the violent death destroys the community of Olympic gymnastics hopefuls, to which Knox belongs.
